As the world unites in New York to mark the 77th anniversary of the creation of the United Nations, the battle against ISIS's propaganda machine is increasingly urgent. As the world unites in New York to mark the 77th anniversary of the creation of the United Nations, the battle against ISIS's propaganda machine is increasingly urgent. ISIS's "cyber caliphate" has been under the scrutiny of the U.S. State Department for months, with efforts to counter its propaganda steadily escalating. In a statement issued on Saturday, State Department spokesman John Kirby confirmed the U.S. has significantly increased its funding for anti-ISIS social media operations as the Islamic State's online reach continues to grow. "For the past few months, the Department has significantly increased our online counter-messaging funding," Kirby said in a statement. "Our online counter-messaging has evolved from simply sharing information on ISIL, to arming people with the facts and the truth, to conducting outreach on behalf of our Iraqi partners, and to promoting the work of local partners and the benefits of partnering with us." A State Department official, speaking on background, told The Daily Beast that, in the near future, the anti-ISIS online war will focus on so-called "cyber caliphate." ♦

Binge Watching New Hulu Shows Is The Best Way To Learn About TV Shows Binge Watching New Hulu Shows Is The Best Way To Learn About TV Shows Binge Watching New Hulu Shows Is The Best Way To Learn About TV Shows In the near future, you might get your news from a computer, tablet, or phone. Today, that's more a luxury than a necessity. If you're like most people, you wake up in the morning and check your phone for the latest in-your-face alerts. Those alerts often, but not always, include entertainment. That's why, even though you may have grown up in a world without television, you still probably have a TV in your house. But when you're streaming television online, how do you know what's worth watching? Most of us are already somewhat familiar with the TV shows that work the best on Hulu, like "Empire" or "The Mindy Project." But if you've never checked out a Hulu channel before, which ones should you be watching first? The answer is pretty simple. If you're going to learn about TV shows, it's best to watch the shows that they're based on. That's what the Netflix "House of Cards" pilot was for Kevin Spacey. You can tell the show is going to be awesome because the characters in the Netflix show mirror what's happening in the original show (minus the serial killer). Hulu can be a bit more complicated than Netflix, which is really just a rebranded Netflix. That's because Hulu actually has dozens of channels. There are about a dozen that stand out, but the truth is you don't really need

Dabie Lake Park is a 1.83-acre (0.72 ha) park that is open to the public, as a part of Manhattan Community Board 7, and is located at the corner of Bowery and Canal Streets, in the Lower East Side, Manhattan, between Bowery and Bayard Streets. The park, one of the last remaining areas of the Bowery and Canal Historic District, is under the jurisdiction of the New York City Department of Parks and Recreation. The park was founded by the Bowery Society in the early 20th century, and was donated to the city in the 1950s. The Bowery Society was organized in 1894 by then-Assemblyman Henry George, as a means of reclaiming the Bowery as a riverside park. The Lower East Side Civic Club leased Dabie Lake Park to the city in 1958, and the area was subsequently redeveloped with public housing in the 1960s, with the creation of Pell Street Housing. Today, the park is owned by the Dabie Lake Community Association, a 501(c)(3) non-profit corporation. Location Dabie Lake Park is located at the corner of Bowery and Canal Streets in Manhattan's Lower East Side. To the north of the park is the Bowery Street and to the south is the Rensselaer Street. To the west is the north side of the New York City Subway Bowery Line (), and to the east is the Bowery Bridge, which runs over the park. The nearest New York City Subway station is Delancey Street (). Bowery Bowery is a north-south street located in the Lower East Side neighborhood of Manhattan, New York City. Bowery runs roughly from the East River, along the border of the boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn, through Chinatown, to the Bowery Bay and East River. The street is named after Edward "Boss" Bowery, a 19th-century underworld figure. From a viaduct across the East River from its crossing with West Broadway, the Bowery continues north for a further 4 1/2 blocks and becomes Broome Street in the borough of Queens.
