Download. A: I am afraid that the key generator is working for 32 bit version only. Link To solve this issue, i suggest to choose the other browser. If not working means that the software or any part of the software is corrupted. Then you can try to reinstall the program. Hope that the problem solves. Q: Grunt concat with multiple src directories I'm wanting to concatenate two coffeescript files. The files are part of src/scripts. I'm calling concat with the following command: grunt.initConfig({ concat: { 'app.coffee': { src:'scripts/app.coffee' } },
'messaging.coffee': { src:'scripts/messaging.coffee' } } })); What's the best way to tell concat which directory to search? If I could concat by whole directory (like grunt-contrib-concat does), that would be ideal. The `src:'scripts/app.coffee'` path is the only way I've been able to get the concat task to find `app.coffee`. A: The `src` parameter is not meant to be a full path, only to specify a single input file. From the documentation: Please note that `src` is not a directory, just a single file. This is why it contains a wildcard (`'./.coffee'`) as a first element. So, you can either do what you are doing currently (`src:'scripts/.coffee'`) or use a path-based config object, with something like: `concat: { 'app.coffee': { src: './app.coffee',`
