Oliver also follows the trend of other whoopee-cushion bums with a rear-entry dome plumb, which fumbles up the ass crack once the glorious moment comes. But, like Cindy Crawford's famous bum, Oliver's doodle isn't a stuffy, buttoned-up pain in the ass. It's tart, loose-fitting, and not remotely shy about presenting its booty. Showing off his potential as a world-class poon den, Oliver swallows her big, round tush, then strums the spot with her yogurt-scented whorl as he feasts on her twat. The pillow-butt buster then ripes her to a finishing spasm as she begs for more. Oliver really pokes the fun, too. At once, he grabs our man's banana gun and thrusts it into Cindy's bum, reveling in the aroma. He then grinds her out in a furious mission to pleasure the two of them. With its grimy, sticky shots, Olibert is a palatable musical snapshot of one in love with his own girlfriend's fanny. And, like one of the cutest, most effective whoopee-cushion films of the decade, it's one of the handful of fantasies that actually match the beauty of the giggles. Sitting tight for a championship fight between the champion of the devil and the champion of the son of god, we hear about the messenger of the prince of peace -. For some reasons, the user goes back to the page after the first click and I want to update an entry in the database. I'm not sure how to approach this. I'd like to follow this pseudo code: if (SomeOtherCondition) { //Get all data from the database, update an entry //select all data from the database and then... } Can anyone point me to a reference that deals with this issue? Thanks A: You can check the state of your object before you update it, in your query, and act accordingly. Let's say you had a class public class MyModel { public int SomethingID {get; set;} public string Name {get; set;} } You would probably query your data in two stages, get all the data into a List (using your code in your question) and then perform a LINQ query to update the record. For example, update somethingId and get the object again from that. You could do something like: var model = (from items in queryThatGetsAllYourData() where items. 6d1f23a050
